History

Louisville's history dates to the early 1840s. During 1840, the Republic of Texas gave an expressario grant to the Texas Immigration and Land Company, recognizing the potential of the area's rich, black soil, initiated an offer of 640 acres to families and 360 to bachelors settling in the area. The company was to bring 600 families to the area at the rate of 200 per year. The head of the "development" company was W. S. Peters, the probable publisher of Stephen Foster's "Oh Susannah". The first town in the area was named after him: Peters Colony.

By 1846, the necessary families had been brought to the area and Denton County was formed. The area which now includes Denton County and the City of Louisville was originally a part of Red River County under the Mexican Government and later a part of Fannin County under the Republic of Texas. Denton County was named after John B. Denton (1806-41), an itinerant preacher who came to Texas from Missouri in 1836. He studied law in Texas and opened practice in Clarksville. He was later commissioned a Captain in the Texas Army, and was killed in 1841 by Indians while defending frontier settlers at the Battle of Keechi Valley in Tarrant County.

The first settlers of the Louisville area were the families of John W. and Augustus G. King, who migrated to the area from Bonham, Texas in 1844. In the fall of that year, John and James Holford brought several families from Platt County, Missouri and settled to the west of the King property. The actual site of the City of Louisville was originally called Holford Prairie's Settlement after John and James Holford. Land competition, a burgeoning number of settlers and Henry Hodgcox led the conflict in the 1850s. Hodgcox was employed by the Land Company to administer titles, plats and property filings. His record keeping was somewhat more dedicated than local preference and during the "Hodgcox War" area residents rebelled against Henry's rule, destroyed his cabin and records, and chased him out of town.

Unfortunately, property ownership then became quite difficult to determine. In 1853, Willis Stewart was sent by the residents to Austin. There, Stewart completed the painstaking process of sorting out claims with the General Land Office and also developed the world's first comprehensive homestead law. Two years later, Basdeal W. Lewis purchased the old Holford property and created the township of Louisville, see historical marker 6.5 miles northeast of Louisville of FM 423 in Peters Colony Park.

In 1855, Basdeal W. Lewis bought the Holford land and laid off a town which he named for himself. In 1862, the construction of a grist mill by Rawlins, Kealy and Hearod caused a gradual shift in development eastward to the King land. In the next few years, Dorsetts Trading Post, Rattings Dry Goods, James Minor's Store, and the first cotton gin in Denton County owned by J. M. Clayton and George Craft were opened in the area of present downtown Lewisville.

The town was primarily an agricultural center until it was reached by the Dallas and Wichita Railway (now the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad) in 1881. Following the advent of the railroad, the town began to experience growth as a trading center. By the turn of the century, the town had about 500 residents. However, two fires in the early 1900's destroyed large portions of the downtown section of the community.

In the mid-1920s Lewisville's character was further shaped by the damming of the Elm Fork of the Trinity River to create a water supply reservoir for the Dallas area. A new, larger dam was constructed in the mid-1950s which impounded water from Hickory, Cottonwood and Stewarts creeks also. Lewisville Lake now provides water for all city residents and is a source of abundant recreational enjoyment for the entire area.

The City of Lewisville was incorporated in 1925 with a population of about 850 persons. By 1940, the City had a water system, four churches, thirty-five businesses, a high school, a weekly newspaper, and a population of 873. During the 1950's Interstate 35-E was built through the city, and since that time the City has experienced a large influx of population from the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

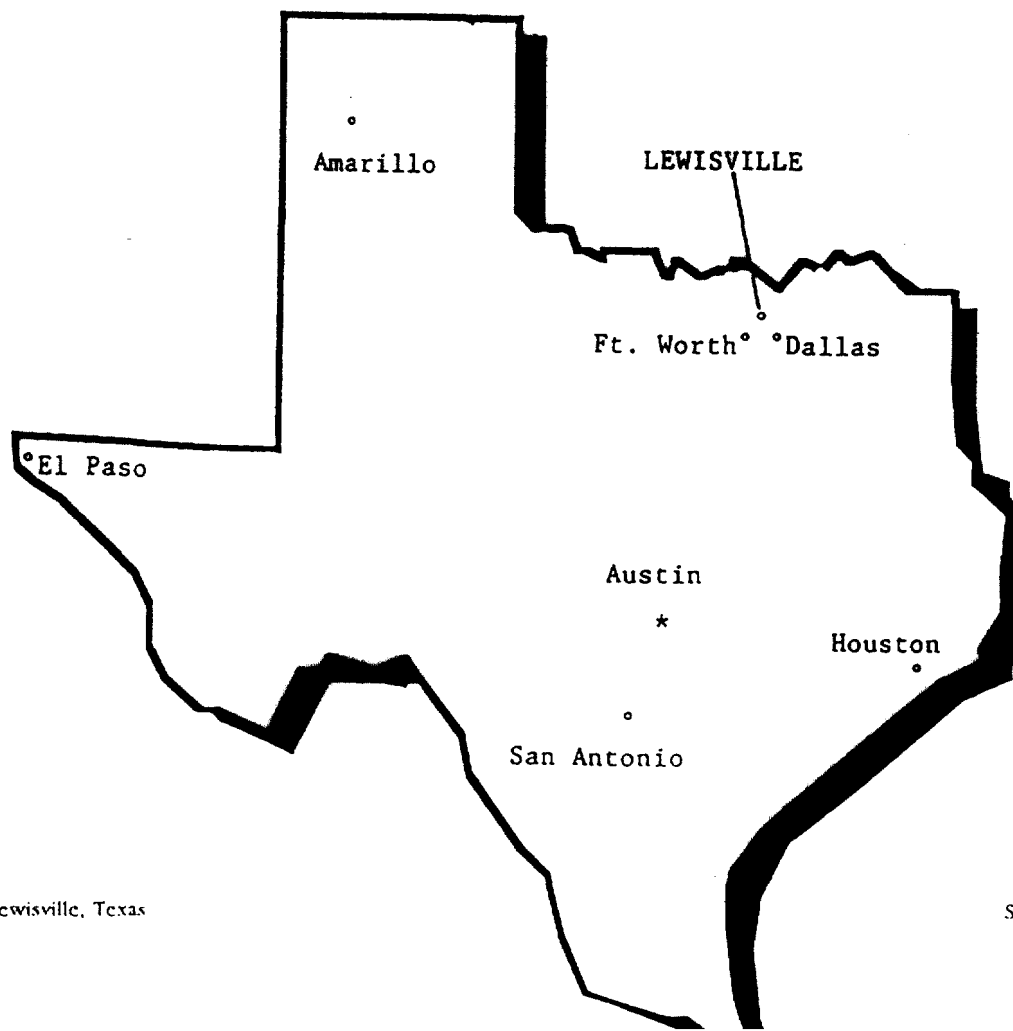

Although Mr. Peters may have had "going to Louisiana" on his mind in 1840, his career change made "going to Lewisville" a more accurate reflection of the following 150 years. Today the future looks even brighter for Lewisville and the pioneers of the 21st century.
